Masks2All receives 100,000 KN95 masks from Jack Yuan

In the face of covid-19 and unprecedented fires, Masks2All is moving quickly to distribute the 100,000 KN95 received from donor Jack Yuan.

BERKELEY, CA, SEPTEMBER 16, 2020 – On August 31, 2020, Masks2All received a donation of 100,000 KN95 masks from donor Jack Yuan, a rising sophomore at Stanford University.

Jack made the donation through his companies, Watchtower PPE supplies and Tianchimed (tianchimed.com), which he has been building since he returned to China from Stanford in March. Thus far, Jack has supplied over 600 million pieces of PPE equipment through his company to the Canadian government, several U.S. state governments, local hospitals, Home Depot, as well as various local non-profits. Masks2All is one of several nonprofits that Jack has donated to, including The Ronald McDonald House of Philadelphia, and Paper Bridges. Jack can be reached for comment at jackyuan@stanford.edu.

Since receipt of the donation, Masks2All has distributed 80,500 of the KN95 masks to various organizations serving unhoused individuals, as well as some working with other vulnerable populations such as seniors and refugees. Masks2All is distributing 30,000 of the masks through a partnership with Mask Oakland, a local grassroots organization that has been distributing face masks to protect against wildfire smoke, and now also covid-19, since 2015.

Masks2All continues to distribute cloth masks to protect unhoused individuals against the threat of covid-19, but due to the additional threat of wildfire smoke, has prioritized KN95 distribution for the coming weeks. So far, Masks2All has distributed over 19,000 cloth masks in addition to the 80,500 KN95s distributed from Jack Yuan's donation. Masks2All plans to have all 100,000 masks delivered by the end of September.
